Cub Scouting

Cub Scouts are organized into small groups called dens; neighborhood-based groups of 4-12 children from the same grade and gender. Dens are supervised by volunteer den leaders, men and women who help the children pursue age-appropriate activities. The den is where many young children first learn about the requirements of leadership and team work.

Once a month, several dens meet for a pack meeting – a highlight for the Cub Scout's entire family. Parents see their children interact with their friends, meet other parents from surrounding areas, and share in their child's successes and achievements.

CUB SCOUTING WORKS TOWARDS

- A child's character development and spiritual growth.
- Develop habits and attitudes of good citizenship.
- Encourage good sportsmanship and pride in growing in mind and body.
- Improve understanding within the family.
- Strengthen a child's ability to get along with others.
- Foster a sense of positive achievement by developing new interests and skills.
- Provide fun and exciting new things to do.
- Show a child how to be helpful and do his best.

Scouting and Sports:

Your child can be a Cub Scout and play Baseball or Soccer or Karate or any other activity. Scouts and Sports together make a balanced diet of activities. Scouting is flexible enough for your child to excel at both, and many Scouts do. Scouting encourages a well-rounded balance of activities, and your child doesn't have to attend every Scouting event.

Parent Volunteer Leaders

Scouting volunteers come to Scouting from a variety of backgrounds and experiences. Plumbers, lawyers, housewives, teachers, doctors, janitors, and scientists. People from just about every occupation imaginable are involved in leading youth to become responsible, caring, and competent citizens. They also quickly discover that Scout volunteering enables them to learn new skills and build lifelong friendships while having fun.
